Another large sale of Whyte Avenue property took place on Saturday, the corner of Harcourt and Whyte streets were sold by the owners, Messrs. Messier, Burns and Watterson for $20,000. The purchaser's name is not at present given out, but it is understood that he is a well known Strathcona citizen.

The property, the corner lot of which is now occupied by the grocery store of J. F. Trenchard & Co. was bought for a year ago for $10,000, giving a phenomenal increase of 100%, and are not illustration of the profitable real estate investment in the city during the past few months.

The Strathcona Real Estate Co. is now offering for sale the corner lot of the corner of Douglas Street and A. McLean for $15,000. This property also has the Strathcona Hotel and is one of the first business sites in the town.

FIRST APPENDICITIS OPERATION.

At the Strathcona Public Hospital Saturday afternoon an operation for appendicitis was performed on Alfred Harris, the eleven year old son of G. F. Harris, who has been ill for the past six weeks. The operation is the first of its kind to have taken place in the hospital and it is very pleasing to know that the indications are of its being very successful. The little lad has been in too delicate a condition to undertake the operation at an earlier date but grew worse on Saturday, and it was decided to operate as a last resort.

ADVANCED LICENSE LEGISLATION.

As Hon. Mr. Cross remarked in the Legislature when introducing the License Bill, the Liberal party has been even at the front in providing advanced temperance legislation. Legislation that has kept pace with the views of the intelligent temperance sentiment of every Province in the Dominion.

The new Alberta License Act, even at the first glance, shows conclusively that the Government is anxious to go more than half way in meeting the wishes of the temperance people. The strength of the temperance sentiment is not known, a plebiscite has never been taken, so it cannot be charged that the Government is catering to an element that they know is in a majority in the Province.

Mr. Cross' speech makes it clear that the Government is as anxious, as those citizens of the Province classed as temperance leaders, to restrict the liquor traffic, to make license-holders obey the law, and to make them keep hotels, the selling of liquor being treated wholly as a secondary matter. What better proof could be offered in this respect than the provisions in regard to the number of rooms required in hotels in cities, towns and villages, the proper sanitary arrangements, and the general cleanliness of the house. The hotels must provide accommodation for guests—accommodation that will ensure comfort and all conveniences. Thus the license holders will be impressed with the fact that, in order to keep hotels, the selling of liquor being treated wholly as a secondary matter. What better proof could be offered in this respect than the provisions in regard to the number of rooms required in hotels in cities, towns and villages, the proper sanitary arrangements, and the general cleanliness of the house. The hotels must provide accommodation for guests—accommodation that will ensure comfort and all conveniences. Thus the license holders will be impressed with the fact that, in order to keep hotels, the selling of liquor being treated wholly as a secondary matter.

On the other hand those who believe in providing plenty of hotel accommodation may say, on a glance at the law and without fully considering it, that the ratio of hotels according to population is too small, and the vast number of people who are flocking into this country looking for land investments, cannot secure sufficient accommodation with only one hotel in a place of 500 and so on. But a careful reading of the Act sets all doubts at that nature at rest. The old law provided that a hotel in a city or town need only have twenty bedrooms and in a village ten. Now hotels in cities must have at least forty-five bedrooms; in towns thirty-five and in villages fifteen, and all existing hotels must come up to this standard by the first of July. So the clause in the new Act does not cover new license only, but the old ones as well. Now the provision of this extra accommodation virtually means that there will be twice the accommodation existing under the old Act, but there will not be any necessity for an increased number of licensees. A very admirable provision all fair minded people will admit.

The bar as a bank, by that we mean the hotel as a cheque-cashing centre, has afforded an easy source for workmen to spend their money for the benefit of the much register. It is a custom for wage-earners on a pay day to go into a bar, buy a drink and have their cheques cashed. Once in the bar they are liable to remain some time and spend more of their earnings. The Alberta Government is legislating against that. The Act provides that cheques cannot be cashed in a hotel. That is advanced, and at the same time, unique legislation. It will assist many a wage earner to resist the temptation of going into the bar and spending his money. He will now go to the grocery or the dry-goods store to get his cheque cashed, and in nine cases out of ten will go home with most of his earnings, or a supply of clothes or clothing, instead of a scarcity of cash and too much intoxication. As we all know many men are frequently attracted to the bar with the desire of merely cashing their cheques, but once there they are surrounded by the sociability and jiving which marks the atmosphere of these places, they remain longer than they intended spend their money, frolic and go home frequently intoxicated and with part of their hard-earned wages in the hotel-keeper's possession. This clause of the Act is a protection to the workman and will serve also as a stimulus to temperance sentiment.

THE CITY'S TELEPHONE.

The advent of the automatic telephone is awaited in this city with all the patience its citizens can muster, but in the meantime it is too bad that an effort is not made to have the service as efficient as possible until the change is made. Whether or not it is because the girls at the central have too much work to do, or they forget to disconnect phones when parties have finished a conversation, and thoughtlessly take five or ten minutes to get their phone disconnected if you want to call up two numbers one immediately following the other, in some cases subscribers have had to go to another phone to ask that there be disconnected.

Workingmen Grumbling Over Arbitration Act

New Zealand Measure Not the Acme of Perfection—Employers Well Pleased for They Jump Prices to Increase Wages—Cost of Living High.

WORKINGMEN GRUMBLING.
J. Ramsey Macdonald, M. P., is an ardent foe of industrial arbitration in New Zealand, says:

"The original promoters of the Arbitration Act hoped that it would make trade unionism universal, strikes impossible, and friendly negotiation between masters and men general. Truly, strikes have become almost impossible because the system which includes in them is outside the pale of the law. (There have been lock-outs, however, like that of the Dunedin tailors, but they were not carefully planned, and an indictment could not be laid successfully against the offending employers.) This is an enormous gain. Industry has been steadied, and the country saved from much loss. That stands to the credit of the Arbitration law, and that is a great deal."

Grumbling Submission.
But the act which was to establish conciliation boards, which were to be industrial and not legal in their character, employers and employed would come together and settle grievances by agreement, and the arbitration court, with its legal president and legal procedure, which stood behind these conciliation boards, was to be only a kind of last resort to be rarely brought into play. As a matter of fact, practically everything which the board does is taken up by one side or other (usually by the employer) up to the court, and what was to have been the joyful peace of friendly agreement has become the grumbling submission to legal authority."

Take Heat Out of It.
Again, the object of the promoters of the act was to encourage the formation of unions, so that both labor and capital might be efficiently organized, and conference decisions might thus be accepted by both sides. In figures, their purpose has been fulfilled. But labor and capital might not tell that the act which increased the membership of the unions completely changed their character. "It has made us big, but it has taken the heat out of us," was the remark made to me by one of the labor leaders in the parliament at Wellington. A combination of workingmen for industrial purposes, whether in New Zealand or at home, is called a trade union, but the union is no more green cheese than is the English union at New Zealand one."

Here a union exists to take advantage of the arbitration law. It is merely an organization which keeps off the heat who may from time to time get Mr. Justice Chapman to say whether there should be shortness or wage increased. This is not necessarily a calamity.

Employers Grin.
When the more idyllic dreams of conciliation faded, and New Zealand found herself on the ladder and more formal routine of legal decisions, the workmen got considering the courts as being in the main instruments for raising wages. "Why," they argued, "should we not be able to bring evidence that we are not receiving a fair share of the produce of our labor, and why should not the courts award us that fair share?" Well, wages have been raised a little—not more than about 8 1/2 per cent. in a dozen years, on the average, though the increase in some trades has been higher. But, behold, there has been something magical about those added pounds and shillings. Their value has not been twenty shillings and twelve pence apiece, but something less. For the poverty of the employers' executive, which accepted the awards of the courts, proceeded with a grin to transact other business. They revolved upon an increase of prices, and their left hands took away the advantage which their arbitration courts compelled their right to offer to the workers."

Jump Up Prices.
Thus an award giving increased pay to the butchers of Wellington, costing £5,000, was followed by a penny increase in the price of meat all over the colony, which represented an extra profit of £20,000. Of miners' award in the neighborhood of Dunedin, which cost about 6d. per ton of coal, was followed by an increase of a shilling per ton to the middlemen and two shillings to the consumers. Mr. Outlook contains many similar instances."

Nor was this the only way in which the prosperous wage-earner with his increased wages was flooded. The landlady, too, was living in wait for him, and rents have gone up by leaps and bounds. A small working-class house of four or five rooms in Wellington for anything between fifteen and thirty shillings a week. "High Wages and Their Exploitation" is the significant title of a memorandum which the secretary to the department of labor recently addressed to his chief."

Cost of Living.
Whilst wages have been raised 8 1/2 per cent., the cost of living has increased from 25 to 50 per cent. Finally, to crown the mystery of these things, the arbitration judges have never laid down any basis upon which they give their awards. Sometimes they consider the profits of a trade, sometimes they say profits have nothing to do with wages. Sometimes they demand proof that the cost of living has been raised, sometimes they do not. No one knows what is going to happen."

Benefitless Workmen.
So the workmen stand baffled and grumbled. He likes the idea of the arbitration act, but he has no burning desire to return to the days of the strike. But it is determined to make some change. He thinks it would be better if there was another president of the court, or if he had preference as a trade unionist in getting employment."

On the other hand, the great majority of employers are perfectly satisfied with the law as it stands except in a few minor details. The officials of the employers' federations growl, make speeches, and get resolutions passed. But that is a mere diversion. It is a kind of band-aid exercise for their federated head's sake. But even these federations have made it perfectly clear that they do not desire to abolish the act, nor the machinery of the courts, nor the enforcement of awards."

Better Not Turn Back.
My own conclusion is that New Zealand, having cut out for herself a path by arbitration acts, would be foolish to turn back. She should adopt her future legislation to her past experiments. But on the other hand, these experiments have failed so signally to bring her to the heart of her labor problem that we need have no great desire to copy them. Mr. Treagar, the most valiant of all the defenders of these acts, their real father, and the most devoted friend that labor has in New Zealand, has written: "We have barely touched the fringe of the social economic garment." Moreover, the New Zealand trade unionists are just beginning to consider the advisability of forming a labor party like our own, because they suffer from every conceivable evil which troubles us. Is not that enough?"

FLOUR FOR THE ORIENT.

"Many of Alberta's flour mills," says the Calgary Herald, "are working night and day in order to fill an immense order which the Calgary Milling company has received from the Orient. They are working their own plants to the utmost capacity, and in addition are taking the output of several of the large provincial mills. At Edmonton they are working night and day, also at Red Deer, and the same condition prevails in the south country."

The Calgary company tried to get the Ogilvie mills to fill a portion of the order, but the figure quoted was too high."

Practically all the unsold wheat in the province has been secured, leaving what can be purchased on the foreign line in the north. The order which the Calgary Milling company has to fill calls for 50,000 quarter sacks."

The Bruckman-Ker Co. at Calgary have ordered a plant for the purpose of making cereal breakfast food. It will be made out of barley which will be grown on the irrigated section of the C.P.R. lands."
